

MONTANA & YELLOWSTONE WITH CASSIA CROSSBILL EXTENSION JUNE 16-23, 2021 | Tour leader: Josh Engel IN Collaboration with Illinois Audubon Society

This trip takes place in one of the truly spectacular parts of the country, where we wind our way through prairies, across mountains, along rivers, and through sagebrush. Every day brings new habitats and new birds, all in stunning scenery. After a forced hiatus thanks to covid-19 in 2020, we were thrilled to be back in the American West. The birding, too, was incredible. The prairies gave up the full suite of prairie birds--Sprague's Pipit, Baird's Sparrow, Ferruginous Hawk, Thick-billed and Chestnut-collared Longspur, Mountain Plover, and more. The mountains provided Black Rosy Finch, in the sage we found Sagebrush Sparrow, in wetlands Clark's Grebe, along rivers American Dipper, including a nest. Of course there were lots of birds in between as well: the likes of Burrowing Owl, Williamson's Sapsucker, Clark's Nutcracker, Evening Grosbeak, and more. The extension came through for us as well, with Cassia Crossbill, Common Poorwill, Barn Owl, Flammulated Owl (alas, heard only, but at very close range), and a variety of western birds at the northern edge of their range. There were surprises, too, none more surprising than the kind birder who stopped to say hi and ended up taking us to view a family of Saw-whet Owls.

Of course we had a great group to enjoy the whole thing with in a region bustling with activity as it emerged from the covid pandemic. It was a pleasure to be traveling again!

Rather than a full trip report, see the annotated trip list below for highlights and details.
